About

Hello, I'm Sean. I'm a designer and developer with a few years of experience under my belt. I design websites, emails, flyers, posters, banners and user interfaces. I bring tons of ideas to the table about how I feel something should look and behave. Importantly, I make sure these ideas are considered and deliberated, particularly from a developer's point of view. Having a skillset that bridges the gap between digital and print lets me create visually striking and interactive communications not only to a high standard, but also to my own standards (which are even higher still).
